

dga

Stay ahead with us.

U.S. GOVERNMENT RELATIONS PRACTICE

DGA Group is a global advisory firm that helps clients protect - and grow - what they have built in today's complex business environment.

DGA Group is purpose-built to help clients thrive in Washington. Our government relations experts have a proven track record of advocating for clients' legislative, regulatory, and budgetary priorities, using their extensive knowledge, experience, and relationships to navigate the complexities of government processes and stakeholder dynamics effectively. And now, as the upcoming elections rapidly approach, we are here to provide insights into the race and its implications, ensuring your organization is prepared for this pivotal transition, regardless of the outcomes.

Post-Election Planning

Strategy Development

We develop proactive strategies to help clients mitigate risks and capitalize on opportunities related to upcoming regulation and legislation from the next Congress and administration.

Coalition Building & Engagement

We facilitate client engagement with key stakeholders who will lead on issues that are important to our clients in the coming year.

Policy Forecasting and Advice

Utilizing decades of policy experience and an extensive network, we provide critical insight and forecasts on the future policy priorities of the next Congress and administration.

Issues Management

Through comprehensive risk assessments and proactive strategies, we analyze potential scenarios and their implications, empowering clients to make informed decisions, adapt to changing political dynamics, and maintain operational continuity in a shifting landscape.

Reputation Management

We ensure that your organization effectively communicates its values and positions, fostering trust and resilience in a dynamic political landscape through strategic media engagement and thought leadership initiatives.

Potential Election Outcomes and Strategic Implications

Unified Democratic Control

Unified Democratic control would allow a President Harris to swiftly confirm her cabinet, judges, and push for the legislative goals of her first 100 days. However, even with unified control, passing legislation through the narrow Democratic majorities in both the House and Senate would leave little margin for error. Any major Democratic legislative goal that does not receive Republican support will require the use of reconciliation to circumvent a filibuster.

Under Democratic control, Congress is likely to prioritize Harris's proposed economic plan, which includes expanding tax credits for small businesses, homebuyers, and families. Our experts can help you strategize effectively to align with these priorities.

Unified Republican Control

Unified Republican control would provide a re-elected President Trump and a Republican Congress the opportunity to roll back regulations and legislation enacted during the Biden administration.

Republicans would also be in a strong position to renew and expand the 2017 Tax Cuts and Jobs Act (TCJA) and renew the USMCA trade deal. Under unified control, Republicans would have the ability to quickly confirm Trump's cabinet and judicial nominees. We can assist in identifying opportunities to adapt to a changing regulatory environment and optimize your strategies accordingly.

Potential Election Outcomes and Strategic Implications (cont.)

Divided Congress with a Democratic White House

If Democrats retain the White House but fail to gain control of one or both houses of Congress, it will be difficult for any legislation to pass without bipartisan support. A Republican-controlled Senate would likely block any of President Harris's cabinet and judicial nominees deemed too extreme. If Republicans retain the House, much of Harris's legislative agenda would likely stall. Either house under Republican control would launch Congressional investigations against a Harris administration.

With the 2017 Trump tax cuts expiring next year, President Harris could use her potential renewal as leverage to negotiate the inclusion of her tax credit proposals with a Republican-led House or Senate. Our team can help navigate these complexities and facilitate effective engagement with key policymakers.

Divided Congress with a Republican White House

If former President Trump wins the White House but Republicans fail to secure one or both houses of Congress, it would lead to legislative gridlock and create a politically difficult situation for the administration.

In addition to stalling his agenda, Democrats are likely to launch numerous investigations into Trump's legal affairs since leaving office in 2021. We can provide insights and strategies to help you maneuver through this politically-charged environment.

Our Team

Patrick Casey
Partner

David Castagnetti
Partner

Chris Cillizza
Senior Advisor

Michael Drobac
Partner

Nicole Frazier
Associate Partner

Charlie Lemke-Bell
Associate

Sander Lurie
Partner

Justin McCarthy
Partner

John Russell
Partner

Ariana Santoni Vicens
Associate

Brett Scott
Associate Partner

Laura Sherrod
Director

Gregory Walden
Partner

Contact Us

Please contact Patrick Casey at patrick.casey@dgagroup.com with any questions or to discuss your specific needs.